Comments:	§938.34(16), Wis. Stats., allows a court in a delinquency case to stay all or a portion of the dispositional order. This is similar to the criminal court authority to impose and stay a sentence. If the juvenile violates the dispositional order, the court can lift the stay and have the original conditions imposed. For example, if the court imposed and stayed a firearms restriction on the juvenile, that stay could be lifted without a hearing, if the juvenile signs this form. The juvenile has a right to a hearing if requested. If the juvenile is placed in his or her home, the lifting of a stay which moves the juvenile to non-secure out-of-home placement requires a hearing, and the juvenile may not waive that hearing. A hearing may be waived for placement in secure detention. The form provides the flexibility for the court to determine precisely how many of the stayed conditions should be imposed. It also indicates that although the caseworker and juvenile may request specific conditions be imposed, a judge is not bound by that agreement.
