Comments:	The court has an obligation under Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act and certain Wisconsin Statutes to provide an accommodation to anyone who must or wishes to participate in the court proceeding (including spectators). The early determination of the accommodation required will allow the court staff to arrange for the appropriate accommodation on a timely basis. The accommodation provided must match the specific needs of the requestor. Lack of knowledge of the English language is not considered a disability under the ADA. However, there is a statutory requirement under state law that a foreign language interpreter is necessary for certain participants in court proceedings. See §885.38, Wis. Stats. There are a wide range of potential accommodations, and the court staff may not be familiar with the range of needs. The requestor is in the best position to identify the most appropriate one, and this form can assist both the requestor and the court in identifying that accommodation. This form can be available at court offices, distributed to attorneys for their use in notifying the court in advance of a need for an accommodation for themselves or a client, distributed to local advocate/social service groups, or provided in response to a notification of an accommodation need in response to a court summons/notice.

Some accommodations are not required under the statutes involved with this form, including:

- transportation or lodging;
- personal equipment or services;
- an attorney or legal assistance.

Additional information is provided on the court system website under Americans with Disabilities Act policies and procedures, <http://wicourts.gov/services/public/ada.htm>.
