Comments:	The assignment covers commissions, earnings, salaries, wages, pension benefits, worker's compensation benefits, and other money due or to be due the defendant in the future. There is a distinction between the collection of fines and forfeitures. With respect to fines, this form can be used for those fines imposed on or after June 30, 1996. With respect to forfeitures, this form can be used for those forfeitures imposed on or after September 1, 1998. The priority between conflicting withholding orders places these orders after child support but before garnishments and other assignments. See §§778.30(1)(d) and 973.05(4m), Wisconsin Statutes. The statutes do not provide for a procedure by which the assignment is to be ordered. Some courts may believe that this can be done sua sponte and ex parte by the court when the defendant fails to make the necessary payments. Other courts may prefer a motion and hearing procedure prior to the granting of the assignment.
